Joining us on April 13th, Prof Anneloes Raes will lead an insightful masterclass on “The Power of Intergenerational Leadership”

In this interactive masterclass, Professor Raes will lead three sessions exploring the challenges facing business leaders as they engage with newer generations in the workforce and seek to motivate and engage top talent.

A case study exercise will focus on a manager’s dilemma when assessing the next move for a talented individual in a growing organisation.

An interactive work session will allow participants reflect on their perceptions and experiences when faced with the changing expectations of Gen X and Gen Z.

TIMONEY LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE

During the masterclass, Professor Anneloes Raes will facilitate a Q&A session with Brian Cody, former Kilkenny hurling manager, drawing on his unrivalled experience of managing top sports teams and integrating fresh talent into established formations so as to maintain a high-performance culture and a team ethic.

Brian Cody is a Timoney alumni after completing the Advanced Leadership Programme in 2017.

Join this masterclass and learn:

How leaders can engage effectively with the changing expectations of new generations

How to address the challenges of creating cohesion in intergenerational teams

The motivational power of purpose for emerging talent
